A Panic in Wall Street.

New York, April 21.—Yesterday was an eventful day in Wall street, opening with the failure of Jay Cooke & Merriman, followed by events which precipitated a panic on the Stock Exchange. The failures above noted were followed by various rumors, all of which tended to disturb confidence and unsettle values generally. There was a report that a railroad and steamship war was likely to result from the inability of the Pacific Mail, Panama railroad and the Union Pacific railroad companies, to agree upon some amicable freight arrangement, and also the Central Pacific Co. was about to consummate an agreement with an English Company to put on an opposition line of steamers between San Francisco, Japan and China.

THE PRINCE IMPERIAL.

A VISIT IN THE PILGRIMAGE TO CHISELHURST.

THE EMPRESS AND THE PRINCE.

I found the Empress looking older than when I last met her, as a matter of course, after her great sorrows and trials, but still a very beautiful woman. She has that clear complexion which shows too plainly the ravages of time and of care, but her blonde and still luxuriant hair, and the charming oval of her face, will never grow old. It was only after hours of most fatiguing work that she showed the signs of age which some remarked; but her sweet and winning smile, and the sympathetic glance which she gives from her liquid blue eyes, make one forget to notice other details, remarked only on close inspection. If not an Empress, she would still be called as handsome a woman of her age as can be found at any court. And to this must be added the charm of her manners, which captivates all hearts. The Empress was dressed in black, wore no ornaments whatever, and had a black bonnet, elegant in appearance, but yet very simple and unpretending. Her dress being, in short, she looked much smaller than usual, and less tall than when seen in the long robes of court. The portrait of the Empress give me the idea that she is much taller than she really is. Her son has already grown a little above her, but when standing side by side there appears to be no difference in their height. The Prince Imperial is a manly young fellow, with good shoulders, an elegant form, and very clear expressive blue eyes. His legs are already like his father's, short and a trifle bent, probably like the legs of old cavalry officers who have spent their lives in the saddle. The high bone being comparatively short, the Prince looks taller when sitting than when standing, and every one remarked at once this peculiarity in the Emperor. It is a peculiarity of this branch of the family only, for Prince Charles, son of Lucien Bonaparte, who was present, is one of the finest formed and handsomest men I ever saw. He is a famous [illegible] and one of the best fellows in the world. He came all the way from Italy to present his respects to his young cousin. Prince Jerome refused to come from Paris. The Prince Imperial's voice is excellent, firm and distinct, and he expresses himself with great fluency, without ever being at a loss for words. His manners are a little stiff, according to French ideas, and more like those of an English lad of his age, but he is always good natured, amiable, and ready to render any little service to his friends. He has one thing possessed by his father—a faculty of remembering faces and names—and on more than one occasion on Monday he astonished his friends by remembering persons whom he had not seen for years. This is, perhaps, the most important quality a man in his position can possess. After the deputations came the general public and the Empress and the Prince stationed themselves in the hall for the defile. Both were worn out with fatigue before this was half over, the Empress showing great signs of weariness. Think of shaking hands with five thousand persons in a single afternoon! But the public was not yet satisfied. Lunch had been provided, and when the people had eaten they again came upon the lawn and shouted for the Prince. He went out with his mother, but had barely gone twenty paces when the crowd pressed upon him, and a frightful scene of confusion prevailed for an instant. But for the energy of the friends and of the police, the Empress would have met Queen Olga's fate, and had her dress torn from her back. I saw M. Rouher giving some beautiful punches right and left as the crowd in its enthusiasm pressed upon the Prince. The latter laughed heartily, not seeing that his mother was frightened. Reports had been circulated that an attempt upon the Prince's life would be made), seized her in his arms, lifted her from the ground, and ran into the hall, laughingly holding her for a moment, and then setting her down where I was standing. She raised her hands and tried to smile, but her fright was too great, and she hastily dragged the Prince into the saloon. Then her own friends repeated the scene in a smaller way, and Madame had to fly to her chambers as the only means to escape from this fond embrace. The crowd still called for the Prince, and he went out upon the balcony, but the Empress refused to accompany him.—Paris Cor. N. Y. Times.

THE TERRITORIES.

A party of seven persons left Tacoma for Swauk mines last Monday morning.

The latest joker at Tacoma is a man who tried to borrow money of an editor to buy a lot and build a house with.

The price of wood in Boise city is $12 per cord, and very scarce at that. The cause is attributed to the deep snow in the mountains.

Idaho has lately received an addition to her fine stock, by the purchase, by a Boise man, of two fine stallions, Kentucky thoroughbreds.

The receipts from the festival of St. John's Episcopal Church, Olympia, were very satisfactory, having cleared, after all expenses being paid, $135 80.

Wm. Campbell passed Boise on the 15th inst. on his way to Rocky Bar, having with him a fine band of fat cattle, from Grand Ronde valley, Oregon.

The men of Tumwater, thirty strong, will commence the grading of the Olympia-Tenino Railroad through their town, next Saturday A distance on the line of about one mile has been left to them.

Olympia Grange had a full meeting on Saturday. Twenty-eight members were initiated, advancing them to full membership as patrons. A bountiful harvest-feast was enjoyed by the Grange. Delegates from seven Granges, and a goodly number of patrons from other Granges joined on the occasion. Olympia Grange voted to turn out on the 1st of May and help grade the railroad on Bush Prairie.

The Tacoma Tribune of the 20th inst. says: Hon. Francis H. Smith, one of the five Indian Commissioners, arrived at Tacoma on Friday evening's train, where he remained until this afternoon. He is on an official visit, having business on the Puyallup reservation, which was the object of his detention in this city, and where he was met by Superintendent Milroy. To-day, accompanied by Dr. Hemingway, he went on the Black Diamond to North Bay, for the purpose of visiting the Skokomish reservation, and will probably go from there to the Chehalis, arranging his trip so as to be in San Francisco on the 30th of the present month. Mr. Smith resides in Washington City, and is accompanied hither by his daughter.

The Boise Statesman learns from a reliable source that the Pittsburg & Idaho Gold Mining Co., have struck the Ada Elmore on the new or lower level, and have a vein four and a half feet in width of good solid paying ore, as good as ever found before, and it has never paid less than $75 per ton, averaging over $100. There is great rejoicing at Rocky Bar the strike is a big thing and will make times lively there this season, and evidently bring out the camp. J. D. Heath is opening a ledge near the Atlanta, at Yuba, has got out some of the richest quartz ever seen in Alturas—richer than ever came from the Leonora. The specimens shown are nearly half gold; he has ten pounds that yield over $50 to the pound in pure fine gold. Everything looks prosperous and lively, and good times expected this season.

Decadence of New Orleans.—One of the oldest merchants in New Orleans, in a recent letter to a correspondent in Boston, says the population of New Orleans has fallen off in two years 30,000, and there are no less than 6,000 houses and stores at present unoccupied. Fifteen years ago New Orleans was at the acme of its wealth, prosperity and commercial importance, second only to New York and Boston. Its river and ocean tonnage in port, loading and discharging, was seldom less than 150,000 tons, and in the busiest season of the year double that amount.

No appeal from the judgment will be allowed.

PRESIDENT LINCOLN'S ALLEGED INFIDELITY

LETTER FROM HON WM REID H. B. M. VICE CONSUL AT DUNDEE, SCOTLAND.

Dundee, March 9 1874

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

I wrote you a week ago, and did not mean to write again till my next usual monthly letter, but the Weekly Oregonian of —January last has since arrived, and I am grieved to see in it opened afresh that controversy over Lincoln's religious views. Being well conversant with the affairs of the Lincoln family, knowing Mrs Lincoln personally, having been in correspondence with that lady, and having also been of some assistance in a work entitled "Reminiscences of Abraham Lincoln" I may be permitted to speak with some knowledge of the facts.

Lincoln, when 16 years of age,

In the backwoods of western Indiana,

Heard a sermon by a traveling Presbyterian minister—the Rev Dr. Smith—(afterwards of the First Presbyterian Church of Springfield, Illinois, then a minister of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church). The subject was. "Is there no Balm in Gilead." Is there no Physician there?" This sermon was delivered at the village of Rockfort, four miles from the small farm of Thomas Lincoln, Abraham's father. There was a great revival on that occasion. Always a deep thinker, even when a boy, Lincoln was seriously impressed. Adopting his own words, he remembered the sermon for more than twenty years afterwards. Book after book he then read on the authenticity of the Scriptures and was satisfied. Many years after delivering this sermon, Dr. Smith removed to Springfield, Illinois. Lincoln's family, and Abraham himself attended the Episcopal church at Springfield, and didn't know Dr. Smith till the death of Lincoln's boy, Willie. At the funeral services Dr. Smith took a principal part, and his sermon on that occasion was very touching. For a text he took, II. Kings, chapter 4, verse 26, Elisha's question to the Shunamite woman, whose child had died suddenly: "Is it well with thy husband? Is it well with the child?" To which she answered, "It is well." Lincoln was much affected, the sermon having penetrated his heart. Indeed it will be remembered that many years after, when he was President, he spoke to some of the ladies of the Christian Commission (mentioned hereafter) of how he only then realized fully what religion was, and how his boy's death had showed him his weakness. This same Dr. Smith, I spent two years with here at Dundee, and attended him to his death in 1871. He was the bosom friend of Lincoln, and the friend and dearly loved pastor of the Lincoln family.

Some years after Dr. Smith happened on a Sabbath day, in this church at Springfield, to re-deliver his sermon (delivered, I think, 18 years previous), "Is there no Balm in Gilead? If there no Physician there?" Lincoln, always a regular attendant, was there, and was much startled. When the congregation had gone he sought the preacher. "Dr. Smith," said he, "was it you who preached that sermon when I was a boy, at Rockfort?" "Yes." "Well," said Lincoln, "I have never forgotten that sermon, and never will." I need not narrate what then passed between them. Sometime after this, a discussion arose in Springfield as to the credibility of the Scriptures. Knowing Lincoln's well balanced mind, his studious and deep thinking nature and downright honesty, a gentleman anxious to have his views, asked if he believed the Scriptures were strictly true. Lincoln answered, "I have investigated that matter thoroughly, as a lawyer would do, examining testimony, and I hold that the arguments in favor of the credibility, inspiration and Divine authority of the Scriptures are unanswerable."

At an annual meeting of the Presbyterian Church of Springfield, or rather of the Bible Society of that Church, Lincoln delivered a long address on the same subject—the authenticity of the Scriptures. An able address it was. His arguments are too lengthy for me to narrate. For seven years, down to the day of his departure for Washington to Assume the duties of the presidency,

He was a member of that congregation, and took part and aided in all benevolent undertakings in connection with the Church. Were I allowed to unfold to the public what is sacred, that which I know of Mr. Lincoln's inner life during the four years he was President, his memory would be revered by all Christians for his entire dependence during that eventful period upon God's guidance, and not on himself. Truly no man thought less of himself and of his nothingness without God. This is exemplified in his public life. When assuming the Presidency, what did he say? Speaking of the contrast of his own time to Washington's:

"I feel that I cannot succeed without the same Divine Aid which sustained him (Washington), and on the same Almighty Being I place my reliance for support. And I hope that you, my friends, will all pray that I may receive that Divine assistance without which I cannot succeed, but with which success is certain."

If an Infidel, then is it possible that Abraham Lincoln could be an honest man—as the world knows he was—and make that assertion?

Is it necessary for me to say more? If so, let me remind you of his words (1) to that zealous

Lady of the Christian Commision

During the war, in answer to her views of religion

"If what you have told me is really a correct view, I think I can say with sincerity that I hope I am a Christian

(2) To the Philadelphia Church Conference in 1864:

Allow me to attest, in response to your address the accuracy of its laudatory statements, endorse the sentiments it expresses, and thank you in the National name for the sure promise it gives. God bless all the noble Christian churches, bless all the churches, and blessed be God who gave us, in this our great trial, churches!

(3) To the Cabinet on the emancipation of the slaves

I made a solemn vow before God that if General Lee were driven from Pennsylvania, I would crown the result by declaring freedom to the slaves.

(4) On the same subject (slavery) remember he said "Whatever appears to be God's will, I will do."

One more final public act

And I am done. At Baltimore he was presented by the negroes of that city with a copy of the Scriptures. In reply, Lincoln said

In regard to the great Book I have only to say, it is the best gift which God has given to man. All the good from the Saviour of the world is communicated to us through this Book. But for that Book we could not know right from wrong. All those things desirable to man are contained in it.

It may appear unnecessary for me to repeat Lincoln's

Public expressions of religion

In conjunction with what I have ushered to the world for the first time, as to his religious life in private before he was President. But as my object is to connect his private and public religious expressions together, and bring them down from the time he was sixteen years old to his death, and to show that he was, for these thirty years,

Uniformly a Christian man.

You will pardon my repeating in part what the world already knows. Take Lincoln's expressions altogether as above quoted by me, and I submit you will find not only an absence of the slightest doubt of religion on his part, but an entire reliance on God alone for guiding himself and the events of the world. And yet that foolish man, Herndon, will say—and I am sorry to see a small portion of the American Press will repeat—that Abraham Lincoln was an Infidel. Marvelous! I am proud to think that I have in my possession—as a reward for a few insignificant services done by me on account of Mrs. Lincoln—the great and martyred President's psalm book, which he used while at the White House, and I shall retain it as a proud memento for my family of "Lincoln the Good—the Savior of his Country."

A word before I close, as to Mrs. Lincoln. She is a lady of great merit and one of Herndon's mad expression to the contrary, was dearly loved by the President, as his letters to her will show, and one does not wonder at it as her love and regard for him to this day is even greater than tongue can tell. If the American people understood Mrs. Lincoln as well as I do, they would respect her equally as they did Lincoln. Yours truly,

WILLIAM REID,
U. S. Vice Consul, Dundee.

A SCENE IN GREENWOOD.

HOW A LADY CARRIED HER POINT AT A FUNERAL—MRS. BISHOP'S ANXIETY ABOUT HER HUSBAND'S BURIAL-PLACE.

(From the New York World, March 8.)

Nathaniel C. Bishop, one of the parties to the famous Bishop divorce suit that has figured before courts and juries for many years, was buried Thursday afternoon in Greenwood Cemetery. Mr. Bishop died at his residence in West Forty-fourth street on Monday morning, aged 78 years. Before his death he expressed a wish that his wife should not be permitted to enter the room in which he lay dead, or to participate in any way in the funeral ceremonies. Arrangements were made by the father-in-law of his daughter by his first wife for the burial of the body, and he promised to pay the necessary expenses of the funeral, as litigation had nearly swallowed up the large private fortune that Mr. Bishop had when he retired from active business years ago. An intimation was received Tuesday that the wife desired to have the control of the funeral arrangements. She had already endeavored to enter the room in which the body lay, but the landlady of the house resisted her attempt, in accordance with the dying wish of Mr. Bishop. Finding that she was baulked in the attempt to see the body of her dead husband she determined to exercise exclusive control over the arrangements for the funeral. She requested that the funeral take place in Mr. Tyng's Church of the Holy Trinity, on Madison avenue and Forty-seventh street, where she and Mr. Bishop had for the introductory years of their married life attended with religious regularity. No objection was offered to this, and the day and time of the funeral was arranged for Thursday at 1 o'clock. At the hour the body arrived at the church and the Rev. Dr. Tyng began the funeral service. There was only about a dozen persons in the church, but the wife was not of the number. While the services were in progress an unexpected interruption took place. The son of Mrs. Bishop, a young man about 19 years of age, who is also a son of the dead man, entered the church and on behalf of his mother requested that the service be discontinued, but this the undertaker knew it was impossible to do, and so told the young man. The latter kept quiet until the service was over, and settled himself in a pew at the rear of the church. The services ended, the casket was opened and the friends were allowed to take a final look at the face of the dead. No objection was made to this procedure until the casket had been closed again. The young man then arose, however, and requested the undertaker to secure the body there until his mother gave orders for its removal. Her desire was to have a private burial, he said, on the morrow. The undertaker, who had been previously warned that if he obeyed any order from the lady he must look to her for his fees, told the son that if his mother would deposit $100 within one hour's time he (the undertaker) would delay the funeral for a private burial. All this time Mrs. Bishop remained in the street, and the hour passed, but no money was brought forward as a deposit. The undertaker then determined to carry out the funeral, as it had been delayed long enough, and was about to place the coffin in the hearse, when Mrs. Bishop peremptorily forbade its removal. The undertaker was nonplussed, as was also the clergyman, and likewise the persons present. He determined at last to submit to her wishes, when he remembered an ordinance of the Board of Health, which forbade him to keep a body more than four days after death without obtaining a special permit for that purpose. The Sergeant of Police from the sub-precinct at the Grand Central Depot advised that a telegraph be sent to the Board of Health for advice. This suggestion was adopted, and while awaiting an answer Mrs. Bishop at last consented to the removal of the body if she and her son could be given a carriage for their exclusive use. Those present agreed at last to submit to her demand, as the delay had been provoking, besides destroying all the solemnity of the occasion. The cortege then left the church. It consisted of three carriages and the hearse. When the funeral brought up at Greenwood the wife got out and stood at the gate and ordered that the body be deposited in the receiving vault. But Mr. Bishop owned a family plot in which his first wife was buried, and the grave had been already dug for the reception of his remains, so the undertaker politely informed the lady of the fact, but Mrs. Bishop was obstinate. The body was then carried to the grave, but Mrs. Bishop positively refused to have the undertaker bury it. The undertaker was once more in a quandary. And when at last the undertaker tried to force a burial, Mrs. Bishop exclaimed vehemently that she would jump into the grave and oblige them to put Mr. Bishop's body on top of her. The spectators were terrified at her vehemence, but were not prepared to see her suit the action to the word. Nevertheless, she jumped into the grave forthwith. The sensation was intensified by the wild exclamations which Mrs. Bishop made that the ladies present were "improper women," "had poisoned her husband," and wished to get him "out of their way." Meanwhile the son had been endeavoring to enlist the favor of the cemetery superintendent to grant him a day's time to obtain the necessary funds by which the fee for a receiving-vault could be obtained. The scene at the grave of Mr Bishop brought the superintendent to reluctant consent to the agreement, and the body was placed in the receiving-vault, much to the relief of the spectators. It was only then that the lady jumped out of the grave.

Walt Whitman has been invited to deliver the biennial Commencement poem at Tufft's College next June, and has promised to do so unless prevented by illness. Mr. Whitman, though moving about, is still partially paralyzed and lamed from his malady. It is one of those tedious cases, not unfamiliar to old doctors, of anæmia of the brain, slow in coming and equally slow in going, when all the other bodily functions remain sound and normal and the mental powers are not affected; but from tension too long continued or too great—the physicians say of emotional nature in this case—the proper cerebral blood formation and supplies fail or sink too low.

DAVENPORT AND WILLIAMS AT SALEM.

SLIPPERY DICK TELLS WHAT HE DON'T KNOW ABOUT FINANCE, AND DODGES THE CHEAP TRANSPORTATION PROBLEM.—THE GRANGER GOES FOR HIM IN HANDSOME STYLE.

Salem April 20, 1874.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

After the Independent State Convention the town was rather quiet, until Saturday evening when there was a political discussion between T. W. Davenport, the Independent candidate for Congress and Richard Williams, Republican, on which occasion the latter came out second best. Mr. Williams had greatly the advantage, as he closed the discussion, but with all that, his flighty attempts at eloquence and lawyer's sophistry could not avail against the straightforward argument of Mr. Davenport. It was not generally known around town that Mr. Davenport was to speak, and when Mr. Knight, the Chairman, said that he (Davenport) was to speak the announcement was received with great applause. Davenport was immediately called for, but Mr. Williams came forward and stated that he was to lead off, to be followed by Mr. Davenport. Mr. Williams then commenced back in 1868, and gave a garbled history up to the present time, striking blindly on all sides, hitting his friends as well as others, admitting that there was great and just complaint against the Republican party that ruled the national affairs, and the Democratic party that controled State affairs. He lamented the course of men who were trying to rectify those errors and crimes by organizing an Independent party, which party, he said, was composed of men who could not rule or obtain offices in either of the old parties, and who wished now to ruin them.

The great question of finance

He knew nothing whatsoever about, and would frankly confess his utter ignorance. But he was evidently inclined to take the subject under advisement and go with the popular side. The next great question that he wrestled with was

Inter-state commerce,

But that also proved too much for him, and consequently floored him. He was inclined to think it was in the power of Congress to interfere. He said the Iowa legislature had decided that it was the right and the duty of Congress to legislate on this subject, in order that the necessities of commerce might be legally recognized. After perambulating rather loosely for ten or fifteen minutes, he went after the present State officers in a style that was refreshing, and having brought on the stage several law books, he commenced to read therefrom. He finally came across the Portland Police Bill, which, he said, the Governor refused to veto because a small petition was received from that city. Then he turned loose on the Canal and Locks bill. He said it was passed to enrich the Oregonian establishment, as all the important stockholders in the Canal and Lock Company were important stockholders in the Oregonian. He then said that there was a plank in the Republican platform that prohibited the interference of Federal office holders. (Query: What were Scott, Cole, Ben. Simpson and other Federal officers doing here at the Republican State Convention?) He then proceeded to try to think of the name of the Independent candidate for Governor, and thought his attempt very witty, leading off in the laugh himself.

Mr. Davenport then came forward

And was roundly cheered. He proceeded to analyze his opponent's speech in that peculiar cool, caustic manner for which he is noted, and which elicited continuous applause. He stated that Mr. Williams had charged that he was the chief of the Independent movement, which all knew was not so, as the people were in the matter, and were now determined to be heard, as they had been deceived so often. Reform Legislatures had been elected, and had reformed in the same style that a crawfish swims—backward. The fee bills regulating Clerks and Sheriffs had been doubled, while the members had been frittering away their time electing a U. S. Senator. He charged that the increase of fees was enacted for party purposes, in utter disregard of the wants of the people. Then this evil extended through all the gradations of office in the National Government from the President, whose salary had been doubled, down; and in every case where possible it had been increased. In other instances new offices had been created for political purposes, and men notoriously incompetent had been forced upon the people, because they had worked for the party. But now the people of this State, of California, and, in fact, of all the United States were awake to this subject. On the subject of transportation which the gentleman (Mr. W.) had touched so gingerly, Mr. Davenport spoke at length and with magnificent success. He declared that the subject would ultimately receive its merited attention, and that it would be so settled that there would be no appeal. Congress would be compelled by the voice of the people to take the matter in hand.

At the Albany Convention he spoke and voted against the endorsement of the disreputable character who demanded a vindication of his dark record. He has seen the infamy fastened upon the Republican party by these same Federal officers, whose interference in conventions of the people Mr. Williams now denounces.

He was told that Mr. Williams would run for Congress last fall if the Bulletin and Oregonian would support him. It transpired that the Oregonian would not support him, while the Bulletin, which seven months ago called him "Slippery Dick," because he (Mr. Williams) had denounced the Albany Convention and its scandalous record, now praised and glorified him as the best man in Oregon. [Great laughter.] Mr. Davenport said that he had been a Republican since the party first came into existence, that his allegiance to the Republican party far antedated that of Mr. Williams, who had voted for secession in Illinois and Lane. He (Davenport) had endorsed and every amendment to the Constitution, as each had been passed, and had always supported the party as long as it had served the interest of the people. He left it as soon as it became a plan-serving party by the endorsement of Mitchell at Albany, and not before.

The Independent party

Was composed of men of both parties—not the politicians, but the men who toil for a living, the men who build up and sustain the nation, the men who pay the taxes and develop the resources of our commonwealth. They had been rudely awakened to a realization of their dire necessity by the numerous broken promises of both of the old parties. They had discovered that the objective point of all politicians was the modern Sodom, Washington City, and when once there they would do anything for money to line their pockets and to run the party with. Its increase of salaries of the President and Congressmen shows a tendency to profligacy and corruption, the doctrine that corporations are a vested right was false. He alluded to the uprising of the people which made Governor Grover get down upon his knees in regard to the Legal act.

And declared that with all of his (Grover's) sophistry, he could not explain away the fact that the people the patent fact that it was a political machine.

It is the desire of the people to return to Republican simplicity. The people demand it, and they will have it. The two old parties are still running on the old issues of eleven years ago, and so determined are they that no innovation shall take place that they are willing to cross-lift in this emergency. Numerous Democrats have said that they would vote for the Republican ticket before they would allow an Independent elected, and vice versa with the Republicans; but the people were determined to rid themselves of party thralldom.

Mr. Davenport filled his hour very acceptably, and was a number of times roundly cheered. But for fear of making this longer than your space will permit, I will desist, having only half written up my notes.

Casual notes and news items.

This morning a young man by the name of Wm Trotter, was arrested at the depot as he was about to start to Portland, on a charge of stealing $400 from a printer by the name of Woodworth Munkers. The examination was had before Recorder Coffey, and Trotter was bound over to appear at the Circuit Court. I was present at the examination but for a few minutes, and will only say that the affair created considerable surprise. There seems to be general sympathy for the accused.

This evening

Gov Grover and J. N. Dolph

Had a tilt in the Opera House, and the general opinion is that the scrimmage was about as mentorious as the famed contest of the Kilkenny cats. The crowd enjoyed the fun, if it was death to the feline combatants. One made a statement and the other denied it, and so it went.

John Kearns and Henry Norton have been sent to the Penitentiary for two years from Yamhill county for larceny in a dwelling.

First campmeeting of the season is announced to commence June 4th, on the Newsom camp grounds, lower end of Howell's Prairie, Marion county.

Several emigrant wagons, headed toward Eastern Oregon, passed Salem Monday. The usual tar buckets swung "to and fro" under the wagon, and the "regulation" number of dogs followed the train.

The Daily Oregonian.

WEDNESDAY MORNING APRIL 22 1874

THE CURRENCY

In the dispatches published this morning is an account of what promises to become another financial crash Failures are already noted and stock is panicky Whether this is the first fruits of the policy which appears likely to be adopted by Congress and which cannot but undermine business confidence and bring financial and commercial distress can not now be judged with certainty The manifest purpose of Congress to pursue the expensive or inflation policy has darned the commercial centers of the Union and it is to be hoped the President will interfere to avert the disasters which must fall upon the country if this Pandora box is opened again

Inflation of the currency inevitably excites and aggravates the spirit of speculation which is at best the bane of American enterprise Reckless speculation stock gambling real estate gambling all sorts of schemes to make fortunes in a day and outside of honest legitimate pursuits, are stimulated by the redundancy of the currency till the idea of real value is lost sight of, and everything is bought and sold upon fictitious and fabulous values Then follows the collapse History and the science of finance as universally taught are both at fault or this collapse must follow every undue excitement in the business of buying and selling whether of stocks or lands The people of Oregon, and especially of Portland will recognize this truth in the light of the last few years of their own history It were useless to adduce other argument than that furnished by the recollection of the spasm of 1872, and the stagnation that succeeded it

The Mississippi Valley States are divided on the question of expansion and contraction That is the debtor section of the Union, and the debtors will naturally favor expansion, because through this they can see the way to payment of their obligations without sacrifice of real value Arrayed with them will stand most of the professional speculators, who not content with the legitimate earnings of money and talent, seek opportunities to invest both in ways that will return as much for the operations of a month or a day as years of honest endeavor ought to produce. These people are so strongly represented in Congress, that the friends of sound currency and sound government in the West, under the leadership of Senator Carl Schurz, of Missouri, combined with all of New England and a majority of the Senators and Representatives from the Middle States, and all the Pacific coast members of both houses, except Senator Hipple, are likely to find themselves in the minority

Owing to the adherence of the Pacific States to hard money, and the impracticability of introducing any other currency than gold and silver in these States as the measure of values, our people will feel the effects of the inflation policy less than elsewhere, just as they suffered less from the break-down of credit and collapse of business last fall. But we shall not be wholly free from the effects of the evil Incidentally it must affect the remotest section of the nation

It has been intimated through the Eastern press that the President may be relied upon to interpose his veto, when the inflationists have carried their cause in Congress It is, of course, not to be supposed that he has told anybody just what he intends to do in the premises but it is well known that he greatly desires that money shall be decreed for a return to specie payments, and as the adoption of the inflation policy would necessarily be the indefinite postponement of that consummation, the sound currency people naturally look to him for succor

WILLFUL OR UNINTENTIONAL?

If anybody had told us before the discussion took place between Williams and Davenport at Salem, that Mr Richard Williams was capable of a deliberate falsehood, we should have resented it as a personal insult We thought we knew his character well enough to feel assured in saying that any imputation of that kind against him would be grossly unjust And we do not at this time know that he would tell a falsehood intentionally and for purposes of personal advantage He may be incorrectly reported or he may be misinformed. One report is that he said in his speech at Salem that the bill introduced in the last Legislature to provide for the purchase by the State of the Locks at Oregon City, was in the interest of the OREGONIAN newspaper If he said this, he told an unqualified falsehood. We should hope he did not tell it knowing it to be a falsehood The OREGONIAN has not and never had any interest directly or indirectly in the matter The bill was introduced as well as memberged by Mr Ben Simpson who was and still is one of the chiefs of the ring and whom Hipple has since made Surveyor General of Oregon Its passage was urged mainly by Senator Hipple and H W Scott who labored night and day for its success and also if we are not misinformed by Richard Williams who hung about the Legislature during all the time the bill was pending for the openly avowed purpose of keeping Congle his father in law straight Congle was kept as straight as string too as the record of his vote on every phase of the proposition will show. We should hate to be convinced that Dr Ellis told this he knowingly and willingly It could do him no possible good in the way of securing votes while it would leave him in character of which we should be very sorry to find him possessed The statement however whether willfully or unwittingly is simply untrue Williams hopes others will judge Williams as charitably in this matter as we do and give him the benefit of the presumption of innocent intention now that undue the importunities to the contrary

Mr James O Meara in his last letter from Washington City published in Tuesday's Bulletin, is at great pains to deny in every possible form of words that he has any sort of intimate relationship with Holladay and Hipple It is a bad case when a man gets down to where O Meara is ashamed to be called his friend

THE CALIFORNIA MAILS

Where is Mr J B Underwood Postal Agent for this District For months on months the people of Oregon have had to depend on the weekly ocean service for their paper mails from the East Every week there arrive at this city a few tons of stale news papers from the East full well by a complete suspension for another week Until the time the Government shall make such a daily service overland between San Francisco and Portland as we have now between San Francisco and Victoria by the overland route We should never receive the Eastern papers till next week

This state of things not wholly new that is the forwarding of the papers from steamships of with out private but to the extent which it is now it is that when there is neither necessity nor excuse for it as while a fast line since the overland daily mail has been in operation it has been customary during storms in the winter when travel was temporarily obstructed in the mountainous region on the borders between Oregon and California to send the mails by steamer running the Coast service as soon as the roads became passable. A month ago the continuation of the steamer service was so long that all the papers here and some of those in California pronounced it an imposition but the year it has been still worse Without waiting for the cessation of a storm the daily paper mail was stopped early in the winter and has not yet been resumed Mr Holladay's stage line and railway drew their pay for the daily mail and Mr Holladay's steamship line draws extra pay for performing the same service by sea which his land line contracted to perform There is certainly nothing wrong about the mails being forwarded by steamer at extra cost in the emergencies to which we have referred, but it ought to be limited to those emergencies If Mr Underwood has no understanding with Mr Holladay by which the latter is to profit at the expense of the public he is liable to be misconstrued and at all events, the public service is suffering needlessly from his neglect or from the inattention of the Post Department to his demands for good service

SEND FOR LADOW

The following from the Democratic organ of this city is probably the most sublime specimen of cheek all things considered that has ever been exhibited in these parts

The two morning papers give widely different accounts of the first meeting of the two Radical Lilliputians who are running for Congress According to one Tiny Tim was so impressed embarrassed and overwhelmed by the rounded periods of Slippery Dick that he could only look at his watch until finally unable to stand it longer, he sat down, while nearly half his time was yet unexpired According to the other Dick became so confused and entangled that his friends were mortified beyond expression We have no doubt that both these statements are true—barring the rounded periods—and that Tim choked down while Dick floundered around to the mortification of his friends and the disgust of his enemies We don't suppose for a moment that either was the cause of the failure of the other The fact is neither of them was capable of sustaining himself for any length of time before an audience acquainted with political questions and accustomed to listen to political discussions Each one felt that he was wanted and couldn't go The air was not rent nor was the earth torn up by the encounter It was a puppet show—the diversion of a few the instruction of none and the disappointment of all Of however little consequence such a small fry affair may be yet the event proves that it can afford opportunity for wide differences and vigorous discussion between the morning papers

Why in the world don't the faithful send for LaDow? LaDow would not flounder around, nor mortify his friends Nor would he be impressed Not the great silent LaDow But wouldn't he "sustain himself though" And wouldn't the air have been 'rent' and the earth have been 'torn up' at a fearful rate if the great silent LaDow had got into that bull pen at Salem Just imagine the Democratic taurus of Umatilla in a pawing and bellowing way before an audience acquainted with political questions and accustomed to listen to political discussions! If there is any ground that wouldn't be torn up we should enjoy being told what that particular ground might be made of That would be no small fry affair A small fry affair when Mr LaDow is engaged Never Not on Why he is the Tolman of the Democratic party He is the—the—the anything—the Kelly of the Congressional campaign

ATTENTION JUDGE ABOUT JAIL

A number of women were arrested a week ago for disorderly conduct the complaint alleging that they conducted themselves in a disorderly manner by singing and praying on the street or sidewalk and Judge Denny sustained a demurrer to the complaint holding that such conduct was not disorderly under the law Last Saturday a number of ladies were arrested for disorderly conduct the complaint being in general terms and trial of two or three days duration was had The evidence showed that the conduct for which they were arrested was simply singing and praying on the streets or sidewalks which Judge Denny has decided was not but Judge Denny must also decide whether in instructing the jury that the facts proved did not constitute a crime and thus ending the case instructed the jury that a crime was committed How will the Judge reconcile his action in this case with his recent decision that nobody else will hurt you if you mind your own business

We don't pretend to swim with Leander on the Pillage was when He certainly was straight in both We hope the case will be carried to the Circuit Court and there a decision be rendered ignoring opinion and decision of the latter of the Judge which nothing is said on the subject between him and other judges who dipped in accidentally and turned the other day

The Herald calls Tom Davenport and Dick Williams the two Radical Lilliputians The Democratic candidate may be a Brobdingnag, but most people suppose him to be simply a knot on a log It seems funny to hear the Democratic organ talk of any candidate in terms implying want of ability while LaDow is the Democratic standard bearer We are quite ready to admit however that if LaDow is the best man in the field for Congress Davenport and Williams are Lilliputians or any smaller thing that can be suggested

Mr O Meara writes from New York indignantly denying that he is private secretary to either Mr Holladay or Senator Mitchell We cannot for the life of us see why he should make such an unnatural distinction between the two If he were Mitchell's secretary he would pretty richly Holladay's errand And I must hasten on

I have almost forgotten why I sat down to write with the intending what I proposed to write with it but finding neither consulting my dictionary

How refreshing, How simple of Oregon will appear on the partial election of independence

The Oregonian.

PORTLAND, OREGON: THURSDAY MORNING, APRIL 22, 1874

CITY.

INCORPORATED.—Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday in the County Clerk's office by Messrs L H Briggs J H Woodward and Jos. LeGrande.

The name and title of the corporation is the "Baker and Canby Post No 1, Department of Oregon Grand Army of the Republic," and its duration is perpetual.

The object of the Association as to bestow aid and relief to former comrades in arms in the late war for the preservation of the Union and to the needy and destitute widows and orphans of such to maintain a due respect for the memory of those who fell in the holy cause, to encourage brotherly sympathy and assistance to stimulate purity of living in both public and private life and to patriotic devotion to the flag among the survivors of the late war.

The estimated value of all the property owned at present by the Association is $800. The sources of revenue are derived from initiation fees from members dues fines and rental and use of property belonging to the Association. The office of the Association is located in Portland.

PROPOSED CONCERT.—Early next month a grand orchestral, vocal and amateur theatrical entertainment will be given in aid of the Home, under the auspices of the Ladies Relief Society. In addition to the local talent engaged in the above portion of the programme, Mr Carl Bosco will give a soiree magique, and the 21st Infantry Band will assist through the courtesy of Gen Davis. The affair will be, undoubtedly, one of the grandest ever given in the city. The attractions so far announced are unrivaled. The object is an excellent one and with even half the attractions should receive a liberal support.

SEVERELY HURT.—The evening contemporary says: A young man named Clampit while driving a loaded wagon down the Cornell road this morning, was, we understand, thrown forward from his seat, falling immediately in front of the wheels, which passed over his thighs, breaking both bones and lacerating the flesh in a fearful manner. A gentleman passing by conveyed him to a neighboring house, and came to the city in all haste for a surgeon.

PATENTS.—We learn that H W Ding & Co of this city have invented a pair of superb pruning shears, which can never get out of order, and which enables the orchardist to stand on the ground and prune the tallest fruit trees. The right to manufacture and sell the same in Oregon has been sold for the sum of $1,500 and the necessary application for a patent has been made.

ARMY SUPPLIES.—Sealed proposals were received in the office of Chief Commissary of Subsistence for this Military Department on Monday, for the delivery of necessary supplies. Contracts will not be awarded until all the Posts in the Department are heard from, which will be about two weeks.

PURCHASED.—Messrs Meiers and Frank of this city, have purchased the ship Panther which was badly damaged during a heavy gale on the northwestern coast some time ago. The vessel was sold at auction in San Francisco on the 20th inst. The terms of the sale are private.

ABRIDGED INSANE.—On Monday evening a Mrs. Elizabeth Howard, who formerly resided in Tillamook county, was examined before Judge Hamilton and adjudged insane. She was conveyed at once to the Asylum. Puerperal mania is what the species of insanity with which Mrs Howard is afflicted is called.

TELEGRAPH MATTERS.

The last steamer brought up several thousand insulators which are to be used in repairing and rebuilding the Southern line. These insulators were forwarded at once to Roseburg.

Large quantities of telegraph material are now at Roseburg, which will be employed in rebuilding the line south from that point through to Yreka—a distance of 185 miles. Three thousand glass insulators and 140 miles of wire are already on hand. It is Dr. Plummer's intention to commence work about the middle of May.

Yesterday morning Dr Plummer started for the Sound country. He will be absent some time, as he will have the personal superintendence of various repairs along the line. Between this city and Victoria the line is in many places, is in bad condition, and it is the determination of the company to have the entire line repaired, and some portion of it wholly rebuilt. Especially the line between Tacoma and Victoria is in a bad state of repair and particular attention will be bestowed on that portion of the line. A gang of men will commence operations in a few days.

Since Mr Gamble has submitted his proposition to the citizens of Portland relative to the construction of a telegraph line between Astoria and this city, we have heard nothing further concerning the project. No public steps have been taken as yet by our citizens, and we confess that present indications are not very flattering for the early beginning or completion of this much needed line. What action will be taken remains to be seen. Commercial interests would be greatly promoted by the construction and equipment of this line, and all will be gratified to learn of the commencement of so important a public work.

PRONOUNCED A NUISANCE.

Several years since a flume constructed of wood was laid from Fourth street, in East Portland, along K street down to the Willamette river. This flume was constructed along a deep ditch, and after being finished, was covered with earth to the depth of several feet. The object of the flume was to serve as a conduit for the water of what is known the K street slough or Asylum creek. West of Fourth street the water of the slough spread over a large area of low, level land on its way to the river. During a portion of the dry season this body of water became a sort of stagnant lagoon and was a prolific source of miasmatic diseases. By the construction of the flume, it was thought that the slough might be drained. Until quite recently the flume has answered satisfactorily the objects of its construction. Of late it has not proved so effective as a means of drainage as might be desired. The channel has become obstructed by earth or other impediments, and does not afford a means of escape to the water. On Monday evening, the attention of the Board of Trustees was called to the condition of the flume by a petition signed by a number of citizens of East Portland. It was stated in the petition that the flume was a nuisance. Stagnant water mixed with filth and mud was standing to the depth of several feet above the upper portion of the flume, that it had become offensive both to the sight and olfactories and it allowed to remain would breed disease. The petitioners asked the Board to take such steps as would lead to remedy the nuisance complained of. The whole matter was referred to the Committee on Streets and Public Property with power to act. In a few days the condition of the flume will be examined, and before the next meeting of the Board the Street Commissioner will have doubtless made the necessary repairs.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

Attention is called to the new card of The Pioneer Fund Insurance Company. Under the present management in this city the company has gained an excellent reputation for promptness and fair dealing. If you wish to talk insurance, call on Mr Hall, the affable Manager.

And now Mrs H. Ach makes an announcement to the ladies. The fair sex may be satisfied that Mrs. Ach has a stock of goods that will compare with any house in the city. We glanced over the shelves and counters yesterday and found almost everything a lady could wish. Mrs. Ach knows the wants of her many customers and has studied to give them the fullest satisfaction in all respects. Children's dresses are a specialty, and millinery goods in every variety can be found. We refer the ladies to the card and advise all to visit Mrs Ach.

CRUSADERS' TRIAL CONCLUDED.

TRIAL OF THE CRUSADERS CONCLUDED IN THE POLICE COURT YESTERDAY—THE JURY BRING IN A VERDICT OF GUILTY AS CHARGED—ETC.

At the appointed hour yesterday morning the trial of the six ladies whose names have heretofore been given was resumed in the Police Court. There was no perceptible abatement of public interest in the result of the trial. If the immense crowds which were attracted can be regarded as an indication. Soon after Court was called to order the defense resumed the examination of witnesses. A number were introduced to show that the complainant had been the means of creating a very loud noise at his saloon on the day in question. Several small boys were examined who stated that they had been hired by Mr Moffett to pound on the gongs and grind the organ. A number of ladies and gentlemen were introduced as witnesses to prove the good character, morality and respectability of the defendants. Two of the witnesses testified positively that Mrr Ritter one of the defendants had put them on the streets at all during the day preceding the one on which they were arrested. In consequence of many objections raised by opposing counsel and the wrangling over technical points of law the case progressed very tediously. About half past 12 o'clock the Court adjourned until 2 o'clock. Before adjourning, the counsel for the defense closed the examination of witnesses and rested their case. That being the case the afternoon was set by the Court for hearing the argument of counsel.

Immediately on the reassembling of the court the arguments were commenced. More than two hours were consumed by the lawyers. Mr L A Cronin who had conducted in person the case made the opening argument which was one of the best forensic efforts which we have ever heard that gentleman make. He was followed in a no less able and eloquent argument by the opposite counsel, Messrs T V Shoup and H H Northup. M. Bailey City Attorney, and associate counsel in behalf of the prosecution, made the closing speech which was a very creditable effort. This was followed by the charge of the court to the jury, after which they retired to deliberate. The case was submitted about 15 minutes to 5 o'clock. Many were of the opinion that the jury would hang and that no verdict could be agreed upon. But hundreds who had narrowly and anxiously watched the progress of the trial remained in the court room and about the building hoping that the jury would speedily render a verdict, and thus settle, beyond all doubt, the suspense. Twenty minutes passed slowly by and still no rap at the door. Thirty minutes, forty five an hour passed away and still no knock. Numbers still remained hoping to know the result of the jury's deliberations before going home, but after an hour and a half was gone and no verdict, they began to think that the jury could not agree and most of the crowd dispersed to their homes.

VERDICT OF GUILTY.

A few minutes before 7 o'clock, a loud rap was heard on the door which was quickly answered by the officer. The court was immediately called and the jury brought in. But very few were present besides the counsel. To the question propounded by the Court 'Gentlemen, have you agreed upon a verdict' the jury nodded affirmatively. The verdict was then handed to the Court who read: 'We, the jury, find the defendants guilty as charged and recommend them to the mercy of the Court.' The Court then discharged the jury from further consideration of the case. The counsel for the defense then moved the Court to defer pronouncing sentence until to day at 11 o'clock A M. The request was granted and Court adjourned until that hour. What course will be pursued in this case, which has attracted so much attention and elicited so much public comment, remains to be seen.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED.

AMUSEMENTS.

Last evening Mackay Brothers Warm Spring Indian scouts made their appearance at Oro Fino Theater for the second time. Quite a large audience was present. A very vivid impression of the wild and warlike rites and customs of the Indians can be gained by witnessing the various dances. Of these dances a number were executed, among which were the Medicine Dance, "Feast Dance," and "Scalp Dance." In these dances the Indians appear in full dress and present a most striking and grotesque appearance. It would be impossible to give the reader a correct and accurate idea of the character of these performances. To be duly appreciated and understood they must be witnessed. Before these scouts leave the city every one should go and see them. It is well worth the price of admission.

This afternoon a grand matinee will be given at 2 o'clock for the express benefit of the ladies and little folks. Children will be admitted for half price. This evening will most positively be the last appearance of these scouts. We bespeak a full house.

A DISTRICT CITY.—HURRICANE IN TENNESSEE.—A Nashville dispatch of April 14th says: A tornado passed over and through this city from west to east at half past 12 o'clock this morning doing an immense amount of damage. It struck the city at the Fair Grounds passing diagonally through the city and out by the University and Mount Olive Cemetery. The width seems to have been about a full mile. After passing the Fair Grounds it struck the Exposition building, seriously damaging it as also the front of the Academy of Music and J H Fleischer's grocery store. A wholesale liquor establishment and several other smaller buildings near the corner of Broad and Cherry streets were crushed. The front windows in Hansen & Cos four story building, near the same locality, were crushed in. Beadle's livery stable containing an immense amount of feed, 40 horses and cotton was blown off its foundation into the back water. Several horses and all its thought one man were drowned. Pugh's livery stable on College street, in the rear of Beadle's was seriously damaged besides several feed stores and small negro dwellings. It passed from there spreading in front of the colored Methodist church next to the Medical College taking off a portion of its roof, then the residence of Jeff Parish, moving the building. At this hour it is impossible to enumerate the number of buildings damaged or the loss, which will exceed $100 000. Many poor families have been rendered homeless. It is feared there has been serious damage to property and loss of life along its track. The telegraph lines are prostrated all along its course from Union City to Nashville.

THE NEW ATLANTIC CABLE.—Following appears under a London date of April 10th. The Engineer of a late date gives the following description of the submarine cable to be used by the Direct United States Cable Company. The conductor consists of a strand of twelve copper wires. A wire of large diameter will be placed in the center and eleven smaller ones will be twisted around it so that it will be like one solid strand. This will weigh four hundred pounds per mile. The stranded wire is then to be covered with a coating of some prepared compound, and afterward with gutta percha, and then again covered with another large compound and gutta percha and so on until four coatings of gutta percha have been put on. It is then covered with a cowl of jute or hemp yarn and is to be passed into machines where it will be covered with galvanized steel wires. Afterwards receives another serving of yarns and a coating of asphaltum. The compound for the preservation against salt water of the new cable is very nearly completed. The cable end will be laid in June the starting point being near Valentia. The other end will be on Newfoundland and thence to New Hampshire.

MERCHANTS AND BANKERS OPPOSED TO INFLATION.—NEW YORK, April 15.—A meeting of merchants and bankers was held at the residence of Cyrus W Field to night for the purpose of taking some action to prevent the currency bill becoming a law. Peter Cooper occupied the Chair. Some 75 gentlemen were present including A D Dodge Moses Taylor Aug Belmont of this city and many well known merchants from the interior of the State. Many speeches were made denunciatory of the Senate finance bill and it was resolved that a meeting be held at the Chamber of Commerce to morrow to take what further action may be deemed desirable. It was also resolved that a committee representing the merchants of New York proceed to Washington and meet at the Arlington Hotel at 9 o'clock Friday morning. They took with them a memorial signed by 3,000 merchants and bankers praying the President to veto the bill. There will be a meeting of the Chamber in Washington on Friday and the committee will visit President Grant prior to the meeting.

DEATH FROM ANGINA PECTORIS.—It is a somewhat singular coincidence that Dr Alfred Hitchcock died at his residence in Fitchburg Mass on Monday night of angina pectoris with which disease he was first attacked but little more than a week ago. Dr Hitchcock who was about sixty years of age was eminent as a physician and a surgeon and as such was greatly esteemed and respected by medical men generally. He was one of the committee of physicians who attended the autopsy on the body of Charles Sumner who died of the disease with which Dr Hitchcock but little more than two weeks later fell a victim. Dr Hitchcock had figured quite extensively in Massachusetts politics having been a member for both branches of the Legislature and for several years of the Executive Council.

DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON TERRITORY.—General Crook.—A Washington dispatch of April 7th says that much surprise is expressed there at the apparent prevalence of an impression in California and Arizona that the Interior Department and Indian Bureau are hostile to General Crook and that they unite in false data relative to the conduct of affairs by his subordinate officers with the intention of making a fight on him. There is no truth in such information whatever for any such purpose. No officer of the Government stands higher than General Crook in the estimation of the entire Department of the Interior and in all discussions of affairs in Arizona no such charges have ever been made. All the authorities in Washington

BROOKS AND SUMNER.—The Hon Lewis D Campbell of Cincinnati who was Chairman of the Congressional Committee which recommended the expulsion of Preston Brooks for assaulting Senator Sumner and who afterward acted as Burlingame's second in the latter's duel with Brooks has still in his possession the original correspondence which led to that encounter and many other documents bearing upon the assault which he thinks of publishing to establish the truth of history.

THE DISTRICT FRAUDS

SOME POINTED EVIDENCE SHOWING HOW CONTRACTS WERE FINALLY MADE WHEN TROUBLE CAME ON THE BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS.

Washington Special to Chicago Tribune:

WASHINGTON April 2.—At the morning session of the District of Columbia Investigating Committee several witnesses were examined as to the value of the real estate in the eastern section of the city which has been subject to a general sewer tax of 2 cents per square foot to show that the tax amounts to a large part of the real value thereof. Mr Todd of Boston testified that he owns improved property in the eastern section of the city which is assessed at about $10,000 and that the aggregate of his taxes this year including the special improvements over and general taxes is over $11 000.

Mr Sewards, a civil engineer of forty years' standing, who has been making measurement for the city for the memorial rolls to run that Gen Babcock had outlined the city limits of the streets around Rawlins Square and found the government for just twice the amount of work that had been done there.

William L Knox is confined clerk of the Board of Public Works and has held the position since January 1st 1872. The object of bringing forward this witness was to prove the allegation in the first charge of the memorial, viz: which is that the Board of Public Works had not complied with the law in the execution of contracts and notwithstanding the painful quivering and preparation of the witness he was compelled to admit all that was charged against the Board. He went further in fold of things not dreamed of by the investigators and was sustained by Governor Shepherd and Col Harrington who discovered the wretched condition into which both witness had twisted himself, both acknowledged what he had sworn to. Knew admitted that the contractors were not compelled to sign their contracts and perfect their bonds, in many instances until after the work was done that they received their pay while the contract and bonds were in imperfect shape; that contracts entered into in 1872 were not perfected in a great many cases until 1873; that thirty or forty contracts had been perfected since the investigation was begun and finally to rap all he swore that he himself had carried contracts to Henry D Cooke within a few weeks and had that gentleman sign them as Governor of the District and thus notwithstanding Henry D Cooke was succeeded as Governor by Alexander R Shepherd over four months ago. Witness also admitted that no bonds were ever attached to the numbers of contracts held by C F Evans but explained that the bonds with Mr C F Evans as surety were in the office of William A Cooke Attorney for the District. He accounted for the absence of a bond in the De Golyer & McClelland contract by stating that Wm A Cooke held a mortgage bond against the contractors.

Counsel for the memorialists claim that they have only just begun to show their hand and promise within the next few days to present evidence of fraud and corruption on the part of the District authorities which will startle the entire nation. The friends of the Shepherd government since the developments of yesterday and to-day have ceased blustering about the minuteness of their pets and display an intense anxiety to conciliate the malcontent correspondents whom a few weeks back, they thought were having too much sawing in the town.

Before closing this report it may be well to state that there is just cause for complaint against the character of the reports of the investigation sent from this city by the Associated Press. When it is stated that these reports are furnished by one Noyes who is a Clerk of the Board of Public Works, further comment on their reliability and fairness is unnecessary.

HONORS TO A GALLANT HERO.—A New York dispatch of April 14th says that the Committee of the Board of Aldermen appointed to tender the hospitalities of the city to Sir Lorraine met this afternoon and adopted resolutions highly complimentary to him for his gallant conduct in saving the lives of Americans on board the steamer Virginius and requesting Mayor Havemeyer to forward a copy of the resolutions to him, with a tender of the hospitalities of the city. The resolutions will be handsomely engrossed and framed and will be signed by the Mayor. It was also decided to confer with the Mayor regarding the reception of Sir Lorraine, and for a presentation to him of the resolutions.

WEDNESDAY MORNING APRIL 22 1874

WHO PRINTED THE FIRST BIBLE?

In the year 1420 there was living in the city of Haarlem an old gentleman who kept the keys of the cathedral, and who used, after dinner, to walk in the famous wood that up to this time is growing just without the city walls. One day, while walking there, he found a very smooth bit of beech bark, on which—as he was a handy man with his knife—he cut several letters so plainly and neatly that after his return home he stained them upon paper, and gave the paper to his boys as a "copy." After this, seeing that the thing had been neatly done, the old gentleman—whose name was Lawrence Coster—fell to thinking of what might be done with such letters cut in wood. By blackening them with ink he made black stamps upon paper, and by dint of much thinking and working, he came, in time, to the stamping of whole broadsides of letters—which was really printing.

But before he succeeded in doing this well, he had found it necessary to try experiments, and to take into his employ several apprentices. He did his work very secretly, and enjoined upon his apprentices to say nothing of the trials he was making. But a dishonest one among them, after a time, ran off from Holland into Germany, carrying with him a great many of the old gentleman's wooden blocks, and entire pages of a book which he was about to print.

The Dutch writers credit this story, and hint that the runaway apprentice was John Faust, or John Gutenberg, but the Germans justly say there is no proof of this. It is certain, however, that there was a Lawrence (Custos, of the cathedral) who busied himself with stamping letters and engraving. His statue is on the market-place in Haarlem, and his rough-looking books are, some of them, now in the "State House" of Haarlem. They are dingy, and printed with bad ink, and seem to have been struck from large engraved blocks, and not from movable types. They are without any date, but antiquarians assign them to a period somewhat earlier than any book of Faust, or of Gutenberg, who are commonly called the discoverers of printing.

John Gutenberg, at the very time when this old Dutchman was experimenting with his blocks in Holland, was also working in his way, very secretly, in a house that was standing not many years ago in the ancient city of Strasburg. He had two working partners, who were bound by oath not to reveal the secret of the arts he was engaged upon. But one of these partners died; and, upon this, his heirs claimed a right to know the secrets of Gutenburg. Gutenberg refused, and there was a trial of the case, some account of which was discovered more than three hundred years afterward in an old tower of Strasburg.

This trial took place in the year 1439. Gutenberg was not forced to betray his secret, but it did appear, from the testimony of the witnesses, that he was occupied with some way of making books (or manuscripts) cheaper than they had ever been made before.

But Gutenberg was getting on so poorly at Strasburg, and lost so much money in his experiments, that he went away to Mayence, which is a German city, farther down the Rhine. He there formed a partnership with a rich silversmith, named John Faust, who took an oath of secrecy, and supplied him with money, on condition that after a certain time, it should be repaid to him.

Then Gutenberg set to work in earnest. Some accounts say he had a brother who assisted him, and the Dutch writers think this brother may have been the robber of poor Lawrence Coster. But there is no proof of it; and it is too late to find any proof now. There was certainly a Peter Schoffer, a scribe, or designer, who worked for Gutenberg, and who finished up his first books by drawing lines around the pages and making ornamental initial letters, and filling up gaps in the printing. This Schoffer was a shrewd fellow, and watched Gutenberg very closely. He used to talk over what he saw and what he thought with Faust. He told Faust he could contrive better types than Gutenberg was using; and, acting on his hints, Faust, who was a skillful worker in metals, run types in a mould. This promised so well that Faust determined to get rid of Gutenberg, and to carry on the business with Schoffer,—to whom he gave his only daughter Christine, for a wife.

Faust called on Gutenberg for his loan, which Gutenberg couldn't pay, and in consequence he had to give up to Faust all his tools, his presses, and his unfinished work, among which was a Bible, nearly two-thirds completed. This Faust and Schoffer hurried through, and sold as a manuscript.

There are two copies in the National Library at Paris; one copy at the Royal Library at Munich, and one in Vienna. It is not what is commonly known as the Mayence Bible, but is of earlier date than that.

It is without name of printer or publisher, and without date. It is in two great volumes folio, of about 600 pages a volume.

It was certainly the first Bible printed from movable types, but poor Gutenberg got no money from it, though he had done most of the work upon it. But he did not grow disheartened. He toiled on, though he was without the help of Schoffer and of Faust, and in a few years afterward succeeded in making books which were as good as those of his rivals. Before he died his name was attached to books printed as clearly and sharply as books are printed to-day.—Donald G. Mitchell, in St. Nicholas for April.

WHAT HAS BEEN DECIDED.—Congress has been 'and gone and done it.' Done what? Why, by solemn vote in both Houses, by a majority so large that there is no hope of reconsideration, it has decided

1. That Alexander Hamilton was an old fool.
2. That Daniel Webster was an old fool.
3. That Salmon P. Chase was no better.
4. That General Jackson, Lewis Cass, Thos Jefferson, Thomas H. Benton, and all the old Democratic statesman of the past, knew nothing whatever about the first principles of finance.
5. That Henry Clay, John Quincy Adams, Peleg Sprague, John J. Crittenden, and the Whig statesman of the past knew nothing of finance.
6. That Charles Sumner, Charles Francis Adams, Wm. Pitt Fessenden, Horace Greeley, and Abraham Lincoln knew nothing about finance.
7. That all the scientific writers on finance, Adam Smith, John Stuart Mill and all between them, did not understand the question upon which they wrote.
8. That Senators Logan, Ferry, Morton and Boggs are the true apostles of financial science.—Providence Star.

PARDON OF THE FOXES.—It is announced that the President has pardoned Leander and Byron Fox, of a New York book and publishing firm. They were, at the instance of Anthony Comstock President of the Y. M. C. A. of that city, indicted for sending obscene books through the United States mails, and on trial were convicted. The sentence was to be fined $500 each and to be imprisoned one year. The President remits the imprisonment, but holds them to the fine and costs of prosecution.

Now if the first effects of the action of Congress reaches us to day as will be seen by the telegrams concerning the condition of affairs in Wall street, where failure are unusual, confidence disturbed and matter generally unsettled. If the truth tells of the leading financial minds of the country are correct, this is but the beginning, of which the end will be ruined credit, prostrate commerce and national and individual bankruptcy. In connection of the leading businessmen of New York, we speak or said that a great nation which refuses to issue demandable paper currency for the money of every other great nation whose circulating medium is convertible into gold and silver which elevates nations through all time have regarded as money. If redeemable paper is invariably guarantee toward precaution and thus produces ruinous fluctuations in business circles. And the more plentiful it become the lower it depreciates and the more violent are the fluctuations. It raises the price of all commodities and thereby impoverishes laboring men. It stimulates to the wildest speculations and so raises up a horde of reckless adventurers. It destroys a fixed standard of values an impossibility and ruins those engaged in legitimate business, must either stand still and rust or go forward at the risk of being ruined. When the value of this miscalled money widely fluctuates day after day, no merchant or manufacturer is safe who makes contracts on time except for gold or even gives credit to his customers because through these fluctuations the value of the currency may have seriously changed between the time of entering into the obligations and the day when they are to be performed. So eminent an authority as Daniel Webster has said of an irredeemable fluctuating currency that It is one of the greatest of political evils, 'it wars against industry frugality and economy and fosters the evil spirits of extravagance and speculation and that, of all the contrivances for cheating the laboring classes of mankind none has been more efficient.' When a national Government itself issues such irredeemable paper all history shows that the evil consequences are not abated but rather aggravated. Then is not the measure which postpones the day when the redemption of these promises to pay for years if not indefinitely wrong and the policy which endorses such a measure greatly at fault? It is time indeed that the rule of rectitude and probity should be applied to the dealings of the Government with the people without which as those who are merchants and manufacturers so well know no commerce, either among men or between nations—not even social order—can possibly exist. But those who are clamoring for inflation are the notorious men of Wall street who have already advanced the foot ball stocks of deceased and decaying railroads more than $41 000 000 in the aggregate, on the bold assumption that they could force Congress to issue an equal amount of legal tender notes once retired by law (or give the Treasury discretionary power to issue them which would be worse still) in spite of the earnest and almost unanimous protest of every influential Board of Trade and Chamber of Commerce in the land.

These vast quantities of grain which the people of Great Britain consume must be purchased with her gold, and she affords a market which never fails but is ever increasing in its demand, and the increased supply must come from America—no other country of importance exporting more largely now than fifty years ago. And moreover attention is now directed to the Pacific coast as a great source of the supply going from American. Hence we need have no fears that the demand will die out and the great question is how shall the necessary transportation be secured. The four staples, wheat flour oats and barley imported into that country in the past ten years, would load 3,904 vessels of 1 000 tons each or an average of nearly 8 500 vessels of that tonnage per annum.

To the curious the statistics collated in the circular present some interesting facts as follows. In the first fifty years of the seventeenth century the price of wheat in England varied all the way from 29s 1d per quarter to 7 8s 6d the former price prevailing in 1682 and the highest in 1608. In the second half of that century the highest price reached was 85s 9d in 1662, and the lowest 22s 8d in 1687. In the eighteenth century the cereal ranged from 22s 1d in 1743 to 78s 7d in 1796. The highest price reached in the 278 years was 122s 8d in 1812 and the lowest 22s 1d in 1741. The total imports of wheat barley oats beans peas rye buckwheat maize and flour are given for each year since 1820. The largest total imports of these commodities in the 17 years, was in 1872 36 877 740 quarters against 21 445 582 quarters in 1873. The greatest amount of imports in any one year prior to 1840 was 4 991 028 in 1839 the most prior to 1860 was 11 912 804 in 1855, prior to 1870, 20 478 986 quarters in 1869.
